. The Helen E. Goldstein Memorial Cup, honoring the longtime Indian Spring golfer and Women's District GA official who died April 11 in an auto accident in Rockville, has been inaugurated by Dottie Frauwirth and will be presented at a new WDGA junior tournament July 3 at Indian Spring.

Dottie

I think the tournament is just wonderful.

Helen would be so proud.

Hope this will help a little.

Zahand Captures Goldstein Cup

By Dick Slay
Washington Star Staff Writer

AREA GOLF

Debbie Zahand had entered the U.S. Junior Girls golf championship, which began yesterday in Salem, Ore., but she and her family decided against the trip when it became likely that the air traffic controllers would walk out. The decision not only showed foresight, it was productive.

Debbie yesterday shot a sparkling, 5-over-par, 37-39–76 on Indian Spring Country club's Chief course and added the Helen E. Goldstein Memorial Cup to her collection. Earlier this summer she was runnerup in the Virginia State Girls championship for the second year in a row, and she won the girls division of the Bowers Junior.

Zahand, representing Westwood CC, suffered from three, three-putt greens and scored one birdie, as she won by four shots from 14-year-old Liz Fry from the University of Maryland course. Lois Ledbetter of Lakewood was third with 84.

Low net prizes in the field of 17 went to Kristin Forrester of Congressional, 98-38–60; Eileen McCarthy of Greencastle, 97-28–69, and Shannon Hanley of Congressional, 97-25–72.

This week's tournament, the Helen Goldstein Cup at Indian Spring, was won by Kim Staples, daughter of PGA professional Charles Staples, operator of Evergreen and other golf courses, on her 17th birthday. She shot 79 to beat Leslye Johnson, also 17, by three strokes and Fry by four. Johnson's father, Willis, is head professional at Green Hill on the Eastern Shore. Healander won low net with 66.

In the nine-hole group, Hooks shot 49 and Hilliard 56 for first and second. Duke won low net, with 35, and Charleton was second at 36.

The Helen Goldstein Cup honors the memory of Mrs. Harry D. Goldstein, an Indian Spring member who was first vice president of the Women's District Golf Association when she was killed in an auto accident last year. Debbie Zahand of Westwood was the first winner of the cup a year ago.

thank you so very much for inviting us to a wonderful junior golf tournament we enjoyed it very much.

A new group of young girl golfers who may be the Sally Vosses and Karen Joneses of tomorrow is emerging from the junior girls program of the Women's District Golf Association run for the past two years by Lois Ledbetter of Lakewood Country Club.

Two — Clare Dolan, 15, of Montgomery Village and Sarah LeBrun, 16, who won the District girls' championship this year and last, though living in Baltimore — already are good enough to compete effectively in adult women's tournaments and do.

In the recent Maryland Women's Amateur championship at Bretton Woods, for instance, both won first-round matches against adults who played in the U.S. Women's Amateur in Colorado Springs, Colo., this week. Dolan beat Angie Munno of Argyle and LeBrun disposed of Baltimore's Eileen ('Beans') Kelly before being eliminated themselves in the second round.

Leading players among the older girls, 16- and 17-year-olds, include Julie Healander of Manor, who this year has won the Berry-Diggs Cup and Margaret Allen Cup; Carlene Cassidy of Manor, who won the Middle Atlantic championship; and Kim Staples of Evergreen, who won the Helen Goldstein Cup; and Jeanne Warrington of Manor, who won the adult-junior tournament with Mary Lou Amatucci of Argyle as a partner.

Others are Columbia's Leland Ingham, who won the Berry-Diggs Cup last year; Siobhan Foody and Kristen Forrester of Congressional; and Lauren Lindsey of Kenwood.

Coming along in the 14-15 class are Mary Duke of Congressional, who won her age-class in the Middle Atlantic; Liz Fry of the University of Maryland course who won this year's WDGA Cup; Eileen McCarthy, Suzan Charleton and Nancy Davis of Greencastle; Shannon Hanley of Congressional; Amy Longson of Manor; and Tricia Gates of Columbia. Gates teamed with Cassidy to win the better-ball of twosome tournament and last year won the Margaret Allen Cup. There is also Beth Staples, who teamed with sister Kim to finish second in the better-ball of twosome.

Girls have to be at least 13 and earn a USGA handicap to participate in the District program. Some choose to play only in nine-hole tournaments until they get older.

Among the 13-year-olds just feeling their way are two Congressional girls, Amy Hook, who won her age-class in the Middle Atlantic, and Susan Hilliard, who finished second; and Lisa Lindsey of Kenwood.

■ The Women's District junior girls program, run by Indian Spring's Dottie Frauwirth and Columbia's Mickey Kriner, closed the season Monday with the Helen Goldstein Cup tournament at Indian Spring. It honors the memory of the vice president of the Women's District Golf Association who was killed in an auto accident in 1981.

The tournament was cut to nine holes because of rain.

Congressional's Shannon Hanley, 17, won low gross with 42 and Marian Sison, 12, of Bretton Woods, took low net with 44-10 — 34.

Argyle's Eileen McCarthy, 17, shot 46 for second gross and Congressional's Susan Hilliard, 15, 49-11 — 38 for second net.

Winners among the nine-holers: Kenwood's Michelle Mayes, 15, low gross 58; Congressional's Christy Fry, 14, low net 61-27 — 34; and Congressional's Maureen Daly, 15, second low net 66-28 — 38.

Proud winner with proud MOM!

Another daughter of a PGA club pro is beginning to make her mark in area junior golf. She is Beth Plecker, 14, daughter of Manor's head pro, Coleman Plecker.

Beth, a shophomore at Notre Dame Prep in Baltimore, where she has been playing much of her golf, won the final event of the Women's District Golf Association's six tournaments for junior girls.

She shot 97 at Indian Spring to win the Helen Goldstein Cup, which honors the memory of a vice president of the WDGA who was killed in an auto accident in 1980. Earlier she won her age class in the Jimmy Flattery Junior in Baltimore.

Kim Cayce, also 14, daughter of Congressional head pro Kent Cayce, who has won many tournaments, both locally and nationally, did not compete. Two weeks ago she tied for fourth in the 14-15 age class of the North and South Junior at Pinehurst. She is competing this week in the International Pee Wee championship at Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

Cayce won two of the WDGA's six tourhaments, which were run by two co-chairmen, Dottie Frauwirth of Indian Spring and Mickey Kriner of Columbia. She won the 18-hole championship and the President's Cup.

Two other Congressional girls, Amy Hooks, 16, and Theresa Saponaro, 14, won the Margaret Allen Cup and the Berry-Diggs Cup, respectively.

Beth Kaufman of Tantallon won the WDGA Cup.

Saponaro was designated as Sportsman of the Year and will receive the award at the Tournament of Junior Champions at Kenwood on Aug. 25.

Dear Dorothy

It is very hard to express our feelings to you in appreciation and gratitude to you for the running of the tournaments.

Due to your effort our Helen will always be remembered by District of Columbia Women's Golf Association through the memorial tournament in her name which you originated.

Your work in planning, running and everything else pertaining to the tournaments will never be forgotten by Steve and me.

My emotions as I am writing to you may make me overlook some of your efforts which has made the tournaments successful and enjoyable by everyone playing and associated with them.

The kind words and manner which you described our Helen will always be remembered by us.

It will be a tough task for whoever takes over the tournaments which you conducted.

May God grant you and yours a healthy and happy new year and always.

With all our love

HELEN GOLDSTEIN MEMORIAL TOURNAMENT

by Dorothy Frauwirth

On Friday, August 1, the 6th Annual Helen Goldstein Memorial Tournament for Junior Girls was held at Indian Spring Country Club.

Helen was chairlady for Indian Spring C.C. Women's Golf Association 1966 to 1967. She was also Vice-President of Women's District Golf Association in 1979-1980 at the time of her death.

This tournament is held in honor of her memory because of her strong involvement in Junior Girls District Golf.

Amy Hooks, 16, from Congressional C.C. won with a fine 81.

Eighteen girls participated from 10 through 17 years of age. The Tournament and luncheon sponsored by Harry & Steve Goldstein was enjoyed by players and friends of Helen.

Dorothy Frauwirth is chairlady, assisted by Ruth Lee Greenberg, Bess Pearlman and Charlotte Joslow.

Dear Dottie,

I just want to thank you and Harry Goldstein for the very nice day last Friday. You made all the young girls and "older" girls feel real comfortable for the day. I know it took some planning to have everything run smoothly - and it did.

Thanks again

Dear Dorothy,

Just a belated note of thanks for all of your efforts to insure the success of Mom's tournament. I know how pleased she would be too see the development of skills and more importantly, the sportsmanship evolving among the youngsters. It's so very gratifying for me and Pop to see their smiles and to realize that not too long ago junior girls golf was essentially non-existant.

Saving the best for last it truly gives me a warm feeling to know what a wonderful friend Mom had in you. Thanks for everything Dorothy. Best to Ben.

Golf opens doors for girls to learn the game

By MARK O'HARA
Journal staff writer

One of the benefits of having a major tournament like the Mazda LPGA Championship come through town is the junior golf clinic the touring pros put on for the area's aspiring golf stars.

At Bethesda Country Club last Tuesday, the LPGA was hoping several hundred young women would show up for the clinic, but fewer than 100 came out. Even though the world's best women golfers are gone for another year, there are plenty of opportunities for girls to learn to play golf.

"Usually we get a couple of hundred, but this is good for them because they'll get plenty of instruction," said Elaine Crosby, a six-year pro who ran the clinic.

This is typical of junior golf in the Washington area — there are opportunities for girls to learn and get involved with the game, but most youngsters don't know about them.

"Well, that's kind of why we're doing this," Crosby said. "We're trying to get associated with junior golf, and this is the place to get started."

But once started, girls must push themselves if they want to be good enough to play in local tournaments, or perhaps one day on the LPGA Tour. They must seek out clinics, organizations that run junior golf tournaments and they must put in hours of practice by themselves.

"Sometimes it's up to the individual to want to be out there and be by herself," said Jane Fitzgerald, who won the Maryland State Women's Amateur two weeks ago. Fitzgerald — who grew up in Bethesda, played on the B-CC High School golf team and then gave the LPGA Tour a try — knows that for a girl to become competitive enough to think about playing on the LPGA tour, the final step is practicing alone. The first step is junior golf.

"I don't know what it's like now, but when I was playing in the juniors there was the [Women's District Golf Association] program where every few weeks you would play at a different club," Fitzgerald said.

Things haven't changed much since Fitzgerald was learning the game during the 1970s. The best way for a girl to learn the game is to join a junior golf program like the WDGA.

The WDGA offers a summer schedule of six tournaments. The season starts with a nine-hole and an 18-hole two-day tournament in late June. That is followed by Berry-Diggs, a tournament that dates back to the 1930s. Then there is the Margaret Allen tournament, the President's Cup, the WDGA Cup and the Hellen Goldstein Cup at Indian Springs Country Club.

"We've been here a long time, but no one wants to give us credit," said Mary Lou Amatucci, president of the WDGA. "We're open to everybody. They must know how to play golf . . . You have to have a little bit of knowledge."

For those who aren't ready for tournament play, there are a number of associations that have programs to teach the game. Girls whose families belong to country clubs have an advantage over girls learning the game on public courses because most clubs have a junior program.

"Most of the clubs have programs that pretty much feed on themselves," said Gene Kishok, of the Middle Atlantic PGA. "Take Springfield Country Club, they start them at 5 years old, and it just grows from there."

> "We're open to everybody. They must know how to play golf . . . You have to have a little bit of knowledge."
> — Mary Lou Amatucci
> president of the WDGA

While being a member of a club is helpful, it is possible to learn the game on public courses. Northwest Park offers junior lessons one day a week for six weeks during the summer. The Montgomery County Recreation Department offers two, two-week sessions at Needwood Golf Course.

"It goes over everything — putting, pitching, chipping, and we have the use of the range," said Carl Fahrner, who teaches at Needwood. "We get the use of the sand traps on the executive course, and then we play twice on the main course under supervision."

The Middle Atlantic PGA publishes a booklet with a fairly extensive list of all junior golf clinics, programs and tournaments. Other associations can provide similar information.

"There are many golf associations around the area," said Kishok. "There is the Virginia State, Maryland State, Washington Metro, the Middle Atlantic and the Middle Atlantic PGA. And, they all have junior golf programs."

So the opportunity for junior girls to become competitive is there, all girls really have to do is ask the local professional, whether at a private club or on a public course.

Then the key is getting out and playing.

Golf: Local ladies volunteer at pro tourney

By David Driver
Staff writer

Beth Daniel won $150,000 while a cool million was dished out at last week's LPGA Championship at the Bethesda (Md.) Country Club.

But a nice suntan and a front row seat to see the best female golfers in the world was reward enough for four local women.

"There was a lot of hype about the prize money," said Vienna's Louisa Thomas, "but the pros spend a lot of time on their craft."

Thomas, along with McLean residents Joan Coffman and Ethel Pohlen, was one of three members from Washington Golf & Country Club who served as volunteer walking scorers at the Mazda LPGA.

Maria Rutscheidt, a Great Falls resident since 1971, was a volunteer green scorer at hole No. 17 on the opening day of the tournament. She had done two previous pro tours.

"Hole No. 17 reporting. Hole No. 17 reporting," Rutscheidt said into her walkie-talkie after pros Alice Ritzman, Amy Alcott and Sandra Palmer passed by her on a clear, warm day. "Scores for group No. 5: Ritzman 4, Alcott 4, Palmer 4."

After a reply from the central scorer, located near the clubhouse, Rutscheidt responded from her chair near the 17th green: "That's not correct. All 4's! All 4's."

After finishing the morning session, the member of the River Bend Club in Great Falls revealed how the scoring process works. "The [walking] scorer gives you the information and I call it in," said Rutscheidt, director of an area women's golf association.

The four-day event, which featured a record-setting purse, was won by Daniel on Sunday as runner-up Rosie Jones' 40-foot putt lipped out of the cup at the 18th hole while nearly 20,000 fans looked on.

Coffman, a McLean resident for 27 years, watched the near-miss at home on television after she had been a walking scorer earlier in the day for a threesome that included Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez. "That was fun," said Coffman. "Lopez is probably my favorite. You don't really get a chance to chat, but it's nice to get to see them play."

The four local women were impressed with how the LPGA Championship was run. Said Thomas: "As much as the players were focusing on their game, they were extremely, extremely appreciative of the marshals and scorers."

TEE SHOT: Great Falls' Rutscheidt is assisting with a junior girls golf tournament this Friday at Indian Springs in Maryland. Call 759-3337 for more information.

Junior golfers sought for this summer's activities

Local junior golfers have plenty to look forward to this summer.

The Washington area has one of the finest junior golf programs in the country, with activities for players of all ability levels and Montgomery County youngsters are being sought to participate in the many junior events planned for the 1990 season.

Junior Golfers of Washington was founded in 1927 by the late Frank Emmett, who, while serving as business manager at Georgetown Preparatory School, designed and built its nine-hole golf course. Junior Golfers of Washington sponsors an interclub golf league for boys and girls aged 17 and under, and six major junior tournaments each year.

The Executive Director of Junior Golfers of Washington is Bob Riley, who worked with Emmett from 1975 until Emmett's death in 1982. Riley, who is also Executive Director of the Washington Metropolitan Golf Association (WMGA), is an excellent source of information about all local junior golf activities. Interested juniors (or their parents) should contact Bob at the WMGA office in Northern Virginia, 569-6311.

The Women's District of Columbia Golf Association (WDGA) holds six annual junior tournaments and is currently seeking junior girls to participate.

"We're just dying to get more girls to play," says WDGA President Mary Lou Amatucci of Argyle Country Club.

WDGA junior events are open to all girls ages 17 and under, and everyone who participates gets a prize. Amatucci stresses that any girl—even one who is just learning the game — will be warmly welcomed at any tournament. For additional information about the WDGA junior program, call Mary Lou at 236-9822.

County golfers slash and splash for recent tournament victories

Three happy Montgomery County golfers will be heading to Cherry Hills Country Club in Englewood, Colo., Aug. 21-26 to compete in the 1990 United States Men's Amateur Championship.

John Mackey of Germantown, Richard Holland of Columbia, and Tom Iredell, playing on his home course, survived last week's 36-hole qualifier at Indian Spring to capture three of the eight playing spots in contention. Mackey (76-72) and Holland (74-74) both came in at 148, four shots behind medalist David Wyatt of Green Hill, (70-74) 144. Mike Larson of Prospect Bay was second qualifier with (72-74) 146, and Mike Matthews of International also qualified at (77-71) 148.

A jubilant Iredell (77-72) birdied the first hole in a seven-way playoff at 149 to claim his spot at the Amateur. Mike Gillis of Chartwell (77-72) and Gary Moore of Crofton (75-74) both parred the same hole to secure the last two places.

Congressional's Pat Tallent (79-70) landed first alternate position by draw, necessitated by the diminished visibility at 8:45 p.m. (It was a long day!) Other alternate slots went to Alan Meyers of Chartwell (75-74), Gregg Tilton of Bowie (73-76), and Ben Brundred III of Congressional (74-75).

County golfers who finished creditably but who failed to make the cut were Greg Bremer of Kenwood, (78-73) 151; Terry Burke of Congressional, (76-76) 152; Guy Steuart of Chevy Chase, (78-75) 153; Marty West III of Columbia, (79-74) 153; Bill Murphy of Congressional, (77-76) 153; Tim Moylan of Argyle, (79-74) 153; and Fred Shrever of Congressional, (80-73) 153.

As the amateurs were slashing it out at Indian Spring, local pros were swinging away on the Eastern Shore at the Middle Atlantic Section, Professional Golfers' of America (MAPGA) Assistants' Championship. The two-day, 36-hole tournament was played at Harbourtowne and Hog Neck, and raised over $100,000 for the March of Dimes.

Chris Peddicord of Sparrow's Point, who earlier this season won the Section's Match Play Championship, was named the 1990 Assistants' Champion by firing an astounding (66-69) 135.

Newcomer John Stacey of Congressional, competing in his first MAPGA tournament, took second place with (69-69) 138. Stacey, whose parents live in Potomac, came to this area from Florida, where he had spent several years travelling on the mini- tour.

Jack Skilling of Columbia tied for third with (67-75) 142, and Gary Marlowe, formerly of Woodmont and now at dad Tony's "World of Golf" in Virginia, tied for seventh with (71-75) 146.

Low scores were all the more remarkable because of the tough conditions that prevailed: the Hog Neck course was wet from the previous day's downpour (which soaked the last several groups coming in at Harbourtowne), and rain prevented mowing the greens and fairways, leaving them slow and bumpy.

Other local assistants who played well under the less than favorable circumstances included Jon Stanley of Burning Tree, (74-74) 148; Steve Ranney, also of Burning Tree and the event's organizer, (76-74) 150; Clark Sisson of Bethesda, (71-79) 150; Ricky Touma of Norbeck, (76-76) 152; Bill Lansdowne of Montgomery (76-77) 153; Gray Hamilton of Montgomery Village (79-75) 154; Gene Harding of Woodmont, (74-80) 154; Marty Johnson of Kenwood, (73-81) 154; Bill Rice of Columbia, (78-77) 155; Steve Bosdosh of Avenel, (76-80) 156; Jon LeSage of Columbia, (74-82) 156; Alex Lively of Leisure World, (79-77) 156; Mike Marceron of Bretton Woods, (78-78) 156; Steve Papanek of Kenwood, (75-81) 156; and Mike Barillo of Congressional, (79-78) 157.

In other association play, Bob and Sarah Cohn of Indian Spring tied Earl Hartman and Shawn McCullough of Woodlawn for low gross at 70 in the Washington Metropolitan Golf Association's (WMGA) Mixed Scotch at International. The Prince George's twosome of George and Gloria Lutrell won low net with 60, but Montgomery County teams were stacked up right behind them. Jimmy and LaVonne Hurd of Montgomery were second with 62, and Larry and Shirley Kushner of Montgomery Village came in third with 63. Fifth place at 75 was shared by Bobby and Soozie Brendler of Indian Spring and Litz Beavers and Elizabeth Howe of Bretton Woods.

A very special tournament for junior girls was held recently, and two very special and talented golfers won it.

Each year since 1981, Harry Goldstein has sponsored the Helen Goldstein Tournament in honor of his late wife, who was an avid golfer greatly beloved by her friends and acquaintances at Indian Spring. Although the tournament started as an individual effort, it has for the last several years been held under the aegis of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association (WDGA).

This year, a record 19 girls aged 10-16 competed. The winners were Emily Johnson, 12, of Chevy Chase, and Mallory Crosland, also 12 and also of Chevy Chase.

Johnson led the 18-holers with a mind-boggling 81. She was followed by Jenny Chuasiriporn, 13, of Hunt Valley, who came in at 84. Third place went to Kristin Dallenberg, 14, of Baltimore, who shot 90. Kelly Doyle, 14, of Kenwood came in fourth with 95. Other prizes went to Michele Mason, fifth with 101; Arianna Smith, 15, of Congressional, sixth with 103; Darcy Smith, 12, of Congressional, seventh with 105; and Erin Leland, 16, eighth with 112.

Crosland fired 47 in the hotly contested 9-hole battle, edging out Allison Fairley, 12, of River Bend and Julie Whitehead, 14, of Hidden Creek, who tied for second at 48. Kelly McCarthy, 13, of Argyle captured fourth place with 50, and Kristin Finley, 14, of Kenwood took fifth with 52. Additional winners were Andrea Bedingfield, 12, of Argyle, 54; Sheila Shadmand, 16, of Hidden Creek, 56; Nora Humphrey, 14, of Kenwood, 61; Melissa McAllister, 14, of Argyle, 66; Olivia Wright, 13, of Hidden Creek, 66; and Katie Moore, 10, of Argyle, 67.

The gregarious Darcy Smith followed family tradition by being voted "Sportsman of the Year" by her fellow golfers. (Sister Arianna won the same title in 1989!).

The tournament was followed by a sumptuous luncheon, at which awards were presented by Goldstein's son Steve, an accomplished golfer in his own right who is an earnest supporter of the juniors.

In other action at Indian Spring, Opal Hyde defeated Henda Lapkoff, 1-up on the 18th hole, to win the Women's Club Championship. Flight winners included Ruth Lee Greenberg, who defeated Pat Eisen; Jerry Ross, who defeated Jennie Cohen; Sandra Kim, who defeated Harriet Mersky; Helen Waldstein, who defeated Gladys Meyrowitz; Miriam Bobrow, who defeated Dena Friedman; and Mary Jane Gold, who defeated Shirley Markowitz.

Susan Antle netted 141 for 36 holes and Sharon Briggs grossed 152 to win the Ladies Pro's Trophy at Montgomery Village. Low net in the First Flight was awarded to Linda Bindseil, who shot 142. Second Flight honors went to Donna Rotondo, 146. Dolly Patrizio won the Third Flight with 146 net.

There have been a number of Ladies Member-Guests in the County recently.

At Lakewood, Jeanne Davis and guest Alvina Diello, formerly of Lakewood but now residing in North Carolina, teamed with Bobbie Hyde and guest Char Trewhella of Bracketts Crossing in Minnesota for low net with 133 under a 2-best-balls format. Low gross was captured by perennial favorite Rita Chadwick and her three guests, Marcella Harris and Linda Collins of Columbia and Kathy Mahar of Bethesda.

Second net went to Carolyn Willis and guest Leila Hendron of Chevy Chase and Sue Mahaffey and her guest, Jodey Patterson of Norbeck. The foursome shot 134.

At Argyle, Carol Lanham and Norma Spicher combined with guests Susan Spellman of Ford's Colony and Dottie Henderson of Brooke Manor for low net at 138 under a "complicated" form at at the annual Ladies Member-Guest. Melly Tucker and Diane Herndon, with guests Jean Kennedy of Columbia and Joanie Heiss of Turf Valley, took low-gross honors with 159.

Dottie Mattes and guest Leland Ingham of Columbia and Marilyn Hunt and guest Pat Haskell of Bethesda grossed 151 for 2- best-balls to win the Ladies Member-Guest at Montgomery Village. Low-net winners with 124 were Karen Crumley and guest Alice Pelkey of Oak Hills in New Jersey and Donna Rotonda and guest Ruth Ann Porter of Norbeck. Second low net was awarded to Gertrude Lawler and guests Shirley Morgan of Manor, Kazue Walller of Patuxent Greens, and Dottie Henderson of Brooke Manor.

Finally, two local lady golfers did us proud by going out of state to bring a title back to Montgomery County. Pam Breed of Kenwood, who is also at member at Pinehurst in North Carolina, brought Kathy (wife of head pro Rod of Kenwood) Thompson down to Pinehurst to compete in the Ladies Member-Guest, and they ran away with low gross at 74, beating 71 other teams and 142 other players.

Congratulations, ladies!

Norman and Betty Hall and Elmer Genarie and Clarence Wilkerson won low gross at Brooke Manor's "Three Jacks and a Jill" Tournament. Low net winners were R.P. Smith, Gary Nichols, and Harry and Pat Phillips, who came in with 115.

Seniors in the news include Joe Cardaci and guest Marty Corry of Rolling Road, who won Manor's Senior Member-Guest by netting 56. The gross winners, with 78, were Ed Dunlap and guest Charles Benjamin of Columbia.

Don Lighter and Jim Peelman of Lakewood won the Free State Seniors latest tournament by grossing 69. Mike Barnes and Al Strachocki, also of Lakewood, were first in net with 59. Jim Fuller of Lakewood and Danny Ramsey of Montgomery Village netted 65 for second honors in the Second Flight.

Lakewood's Lighter compounded his overall victory by winning closest-to-the-pin, 6 feet on the fifth hole.

On the public scene, Anne Bahre defeated Incke Smit to win the First Flight of the Needwood Women's Golf Association's Match Play Tournament. Margaret Levchenko defeated Joan McShane to win the Second Flight, while Sylvia Waller bested Louise Park in Flight Three. Anne Graham won the Fourth Flight over Marion Higgins.

Two teams tied at 3-under 33 for first place in Poolesville's recent 9-Hole Night Scramble. Locals Cory Farrell, Dave Poe, Bob Dembo, and Jim Sood finished deadeven with the Herndon foursome of Jeff Hetrick, John Adams, Dave Robinson, and Rob Studer.

Tiana Meyer grossed 82 and Sharon Carney netted 67 to win the A Flight of the Falls Road Women's Golf Association's All Irons Tournament. Top honors in the B Flight went to Marge Gott, low gross with 99, and Cathy Wackwitz, low net with 65.

Harry Adams, Paul Check, Frank DiBella, and Buz Tull came in first at RedGate's recent 1-2-3 Best Ball Tournament. Second place, at 118, went to John Bartkow, Lou Dombrowski, Duwayne Evans, and Paul Thorton. Ken Reves was individual medalist with 71 gross.

Also at RedGate, Paul Wang's tee shot landed 4 feet 7 inches from the pin on the 125-yard 15th hole to win WJLA-Channel 7's "Beat the Pro" Contest. The pro in question, Celtic great Sam Jones, hit his best ball only 9 feet 1/4 inches from the hole. Wang, who went off in the last group of the day, dashed the hopes of RedGate regular John Tanner, who very early in the morning had placed his ball 5 feet 1/2 inches from the hole in question.

By virtue of his victory at RedGate, Wang wiz go to an area-wide shoot-out at Lakewood, where he stands to win a Cadillac, an exotic vacation, or a multitude of other desirable prizes. The outcome of this competition will be reported in a later edition of "On the Links."

Hogg, Chuasiriporn win juniors

Serge Hogg and Jenny Chuasiriporn won the boys and girls overall titles, respectively, in the local segment of the annual Middle Atlantic PGA Pro-Junior tournament at Rocky Point Golf Course yesterday.

The course escaped much of the day's rainy weather, with only five of 22 groups forced to wait out a 45-minute delay before completing their rounds.

Hogg, playing from Longview Golf Course, won on a match of cards after tying with Dean Blankenship of Wakefield Valley GC. The 3 handicappers registered a 1-over-par 73. Chuasiriporn, 14, a previous winner in events on this eastern Baltimore County course, had her best round for the site, 39-39-78.

Hogg, 16, and a Calvert Hall senior, went 4-over par on the last three holes of the front nine, then dipped 3 under on the return for 39-34 against a par of 35-37.

Jimmy Hyams of Woodholme CC won the pro sweeps with a 4-under-par 35-33-68.

Girls division

Overall winner: Jenny Chuasiriporn, Hunt Valley, 39-39-78. 2. Kristin Dollenberg, Baltimore CC, 45-42-87. 3. Laura Patterson, Cambridge, 48-44-92.

Crosland's 86 proves a winner in WDGA finale

Mallory Crosland of the Chevy Chase Club and Andrea Beddingfield of Argyle led their divisions at the annual Women's District Golf Association Helen Goldstein Tournament for junior girls at Indian Spring Country Club. The event, traditionally held in early August, marks the end of the WDGA's junior tournament season.

Crosland, 13, last year's nine-hole champion, led the 18-hole division with an 86 on the Valley course. She was followed by April Hardisty, 16, of Caroline Country Club in Easton, who shot 87. Last year's 18-hole champion, Emily Johnson, also 13 and a Chevy Chase member, came in third with 88.

Among the local contenders, sisters Darcy, 13, and Arianna Smith, 16, of Congressional finished fifth with 98 and seventh with 102 in the 18-hole division, respectively.

Beddingfield, 13, who has been a consistent player this season, earned top honors for the nine-holers with 50, one stroke ahead of runner-up Allison Fairley, 13, of River Bend. Argyle's Erica Brammer, 11, took fourth place with 61, and Katie Moore, also 11 and of Argyle, was fifth with 62.

Junior Girls Claim WDGA Titles

Chuasiriporn, who carries a 10.4 handicap index, fired (82-79) 161 at Argyle on June 24-25. Harvison followed, taking second place with (86-83) 169.

Third place went to Kristin Dollenberg, 15, of Baltimore Country Club, (89-83) 172.

Angie Marx, 13, a former Oklahoma State Junior Champion who now plays out of Reston South, came in fourth with (90-99) 189, and fifteen-year-old Kelly Doyle of Kenwood took fifth with (100-95) 195.

In the nine-hole division, Allison Fairley, 13, of River Bend claimed the championship with (47-53) 100. Other nine-hole winners were Andrea Beddingfield, 13, of the host course, (62-56) 118; first-year competitor Katie Schneck, 12, of Westwood, (68-64) 132; Megan Wood, 13, of River Bend, (80-78) 158; and Argyle's own Katie Moore, 11, (74-87) 161.

Later, Ms. Dollenberg and Ms. Moore netted 67 and 27, respectively, to take top honors for the 18- and 9-holers at the WDGA Berry-Diggs Tournament on July 1 at River Bend.

Runners-up for the 18-holers included Sheila Shahmond, 17, of Hidden Creek, 79 net; Emily Johnson, 13, of Chevy Chase, 82 net; Erin Toland, 17, of Brooke Manor, playing in her last junior tournament before reporting for her first year at the U.S. Naval Academy, 82 net; Arianna Smith, 16, of Congressional, 85 net; and Julie Whitehead, 17, of Hidden Creek, 91 net.

Runners-up in the nine-hole division were Kirstin Shade, 14, of Washington Golf and Country Club, 28 net; Andrea Beddingfield of Argyle, 30; Allison Fairley of River Bend, 31; Una O'Riordan, 14, of River Bend, 32; Westwood's Katie Schneck, 34; Kathleen Lubin, 12, of River Bend, 36; Amy Jenkinson, 15, 39; Molly Toland, 15, of Brooke Manor, 44; Keslie Tomlinson, 9, of River Bend, 49; and Latane Beck, 11, of Washington Golf and Country Club, 55.

The Women's District of Columbia Golf Association is always seeking new junior girls to participate in its tournament program. Participating juniors need not be expert players: the program is designed for golfers of all ability levels, and every girl who plays in a WDGA junior event receives a prize.

s in sponsors, TV
noney, the Ladies
ciation Tour enjoys rity today. But the
't filtered down to the younger ages, where golf still may be seen as a "boys" sport.

"I would say it doesn't appeal to girls at first," said Emily Johnson, 13, of Bethesda, the MSGA 10-13 age-group girls champion, who plays out of the Chevy Chase Club. "Golf is a sport that can be played by either sex, but [at this age] girls want to play on teams with other girls, like field hockey and sports like that. One reason I play is because my family plays."

Mary Margaret Smith, the junior golf coordinator at Congressional Country Club who oversees a program of 112 juniors — including 28 girls — said parent involvement is crucial to the success of a program, boys or girls. Three of Smith's daughters — including Arianna — play or have played in the Congressional program.

"Obviously, the parents have to help," Mary Margaret Smith said. "A lot of the girls who come out have mothers who are good golfers. That helps . . . but it's still sort of a mystery why girls drop out."

"Families have a lot to do with it," said Shannon Hanley, 24, who came out of the Congressional and WDGA junior programs and is trying for a spot on the LPGA Tour. "Females whose mothers played tennis played tennis and those whose mothers played golf played golf. It was always like that."

Please see GOLF, C2

Hanley to try again for LPGA Tour slot

Shannon Hanley's first attempt to join the Ladies Professional Golf Association Tour may not have been successful, but it was certainly educational.

Hanley, 24, of Germantown, took her first crack at the tour last Tuesday in an LPGA sectional qualifying tournament at the Plantation Golf and Country Club in Venice, Fla. Her 16-over-par 88 wasn't enough to get her past the first round, but she said it was an experience she won't forget soon.

"There was just a different mentality down there," said Hanley, the defending Maryland Amateur women's champion. "Things are so tense, people don't even talk to each other. People were not friendly down there."

Hanley said she will practice at her home course, Congressional Country Club, until the next qualifying tournament Sept. 15-17 at Mission Hills Country Club in Rancho Mirage, Calif. The top 30 golfers from that tournament, as well as the Venice tournament, will meet Oct. 15-18 in Daytona Beach, Fla., for the LPGA qualifying finals.

Germantown's Shannon Hanley, 24, missed cut in Florida.

Kim Williams, of Bethesda, may be on her way back to the LPGA Tour. Williams put together rounds of 75, 77 and 71 to tie for 18th in the tournament and earn a spot in Daytona. Leland Ingham, of Columbia Country Club, completed the tournament but missed the final cut by three strokes.

Jenny Chuasiriporn, wanting to expand her golf horizons during 1993, strengthened her schedule with more tournaments at the national level.

The results included three titles and a runner-up finish, and the Timonium resident's efforts were recently recognized with her selection as a first-team Rolex All-American by the American Junior Golf Association.

Introduced by the AJGA in 1978, the All-America team recognizes players who have distinguished [illegible] terested in the sport and in tournament play. About a dozen girls have competed in recent Junior events conducted by the Maryland State and Middle Atlantic associations, and not many others in the long-running Jimmy Flattery tournament conducted at Hunt Valley GC.

"I'd like to see more girls get involved, and I have talked to my coach about it," Chuasiriporn said. "I'd like to try and get a play day going for area schools, let the girls see what golf is like. I think there is a possibility we will be able to do something in the spring."

Chuasiriporn is a junior at Notre Dame Prep, where she is on the student council and is a member of the school's eighth-ranked field hockey team. Last winter, she played varsity basketball, but doesn't plan to continue with the sport.

"I love hockey and enjoy other team sports — I've played everything — but I feel the need to spend more time on the academics."
