Hollenbeck Leads by 1 In Keefer

By Ben Gieser
Special to The Washington Post

Nancy Hollenbeck of Army Navy converted what she thought was a terrible golf shot into a par on the fourth hole and went on to shoot net 80-9-71 for a one-shot lead in the 36-hole Women's District Golf Association Keefer Cup yesterday at Chevy Chase Club.

Hollenbeck has a one-stroke lead over Dot Gates of Columbia (84-12-72). Four other players—Army Navy's Fran King (85-12-73) and Nada Ruess (86-13-73), Argyle's Gerry Kush (86-12-74) and Congressional's Arlene English (83-8-74)—were within three strokes of the leader going into today's final round.

Hitting off the tee on the par-3, 142-yard fourth hole yesterday, Hollenbeck made poor contact using a six-iron and feared she hit the ball into a creek guarding the green. "I thought I saw a splash, but the ball must have skipped to the other side," she said.

Hollenbeck, a retired Navy officer and former Keefer Cup champion, chipped her second shot 10 feet from the hole and sank the putt for one of her eight pars. She also had one birdie, on the second hole.

"I lucked out on that hole," Hollenbeck said. "When you are playing well, it goes for you."

Gates survived an unusual start and made two birdies on a windy final nine of 39. Before she stepped onto the course, Gates discovered her sand wedge was missing from her golf bag; her daughter had failed to return it. Gates drove home, returned, and opened with a mediocre 45 which included two double bogeys.

On her final nine, she made one birdie against the wind and one it at her back.

"The wind was like a hurricane," Gates said. "When you were hitting into it, you had to take two more clubs. When it was with you, two less than you normally would. It was tricky."

King knocked a five-wood shot into the hole for an eagle on the par-5 eighth hole. She and playing partner Mary Kauffman thought King's five-wood third shot went over the green. "I looked around behind the green and couldn't find the ball," King said. "And then I went and looked in the cup, and there it was."

KEEFER CUP

Amy Geithner tees off in her playoff victory in the WDGA tournament at Chevy Chase Club.

Geithner Wins Keefer Playoff

By Ben Gieser
Special to The Washington Post

Amy Geithner of Fairfax parred the first hole of a playoff against Arlene English of Congressional and Nancy Hollenbeck of Army Navy and won the Women's District Golf Association Keefer Cup yesterday at Chevy Chase Club.

Geithner, 23, the reigning Women's District champion, came from five shots off the pace to overtake first-round leader Hollenbeck, who faltered with a front-nine 44. Hollenbeck shot 84-9-75 yesterday and English scored 81-9-72. The three were tied at 36-hole net 146 to force the playoff. Hollenbeck took second place in a match of cards.

Geithner, who in two weeks will receive a master's degree in physical education at the University of Maryland, had added a net 73-3-70 to an opening-round 79-3-76.

"After the first round, I really didn't think I had too good a chance to win," said Geithner. "My handicap is so low I thought I'd have to shoot an even-par round to be close." Geithner's 73 was two over women's par.

Because of her low handicap, Geithner had to give English and Hollenbeck each a stroke on the par-4, 361-yard first playoff hole. It didn't matter, because Geithner slammed a long drive and followed with a picture-perfect three-iron second shot which left the ball 15 feet from the hole. She two-putted for a par 4 while both English and Hollenbeck staggered to double-bogey 6s.

Kim Williams of Bethesda, the only scratch (zero handicap) player in the field, won low gross (76-72).

Bobbie Kane of Springfield, Va., and Army Navy Club, a participant in the tournament, suffered a massive heart attack while playing the third hole. Kane was taken to Suburban Hospital where her condition in the coronary care unit was listed as "critical," according to Nancy Suddath, office manager in public relations at the hospital.

Kane was stricken at approximately 10 a.m. in her golf cart just after she and her playing partner had teed off on the third hole. An ambulance was called and rescue squad personnel administered to her for about 30 minutes before putting her in an ambulance. On the way to the hospital, the ambulance collided with an automobile at the intersection of Bradley Lane and Connecticut Avenue. Another ambulance was summoned, which took Kane to the hospital.

Davis Leads WDGA With 74

Cindy Davis of Prince Georges, runner-up in the recent NCAA women's championship, shot 74 yesterday at Woodmont Country Club's North Course and won the medal in qualifying for the Women's District Golf Association Championships.

Davis will play Fran Schultz of Army Navy (82) in this morning's opening match starting at 9:18.

Defending champion Amy Geithner of Fairfax shot 82, three strokes below the championship flight cutoff. She will play Ann Chesney of Army Navy (85) in her opening match.

The tournament runs through Friday, with one round of match play scheduled each day.

Geithner Wins Opener

Defending champion Amy Geithner defeated Ann Chesney of Army Navy, 7 and 6, in the opening round of match play in the Women's District Golf Association Championships yesterday at Woodmont Country Club's North Course.

Geithner, several times women's club champion at Country Club of Fairfax, qualified with an 83 Monday which was just two strokes below the cutoff.

Today's quarterfinals begin at 9:42 a.m.

Geithner Defends Link Title

By MICHELLE HISKEY

Special to The Journal

Amy Geithner hopes a successful defense of her Women's District Golf Association Championship title this week at Woodmont will catalyze a prosperous summer of competition and perhaps propel her into a pro career.

"If I do well this summer, I'd like to try the mini-tour in California in the fall, as an amateur," she said shortly after finishing her spring semester at University of Maryland, where she is three credits and a thesis short of earning her masters' degree in physical education.

The 23-year-old Wake Forest graduate, an eight-time winner of the ladies' club championship at CC of Fairfax, is one of the lowest handicappers entered in the WDGA race, with a three handicap. Kim Williams of Bethesda, the runnerup to Geithner last year, has a good chance of unseating her if the odds are based on handicaps, with Williams coming in with a 1.

But her biggest challenge will probably come from Cindy Davis, a District newcomer from Prince Georges. A junior at Furman, Davis recently capped off her most successful college season with a second-place placing in the NCAA Championship in Athens, Ga., a finish which boosted her to a first-team All-America berth.

Davis won the District junior girls title in 1979 on Woodmont's South course, and played the Maryland state juniors on the North track, the site of the WDGA tournament. The North is acknowledged as the more difficult of the two, playing to a longer yardage and requiring placement on shots to the tight fairways. Sand traps and water hazards come in handfulls on the North course.

The field, which closed with 121 entries from the 31-club WDGA membership, narrowed to 80 after an 18-hole qualifying round on Monday. Those 80 were placed in five flights of 16 players according to score, with four rounds of match play the rest of the week to determine flight winners.

"This tournament should show the best of women's golf in the Washington area," predicted tournament chairman Mary Lou Amatucci, who noted that the event's 30-year-plus history adds to its prestige. "The field is a pretty good cross-section of women golfers in this area."

Amatucci noted that going into the tournament there were several other low handicappers who would be vying for Geithner's crown, including Argyle's Karen Jones (2) and Kenwood's Jane Abood (3). The Northern Virginia area is represented by Kim Grace (4) and Lorraine Elder (5), both college players from Army/Navy, and Debbie Zahand (5) of Westwood.

Through the Green

If Geithner does win, she probably won't have time to let it sink in — her schedule reads more like a Tour player's than a local amateur's. But hopefully Geithner will be more than a local amateur when she's through — she's aiming for an national amateur ranking along with tournament victories.

After the WDGA, she will play in the Virginia's 54-hole stroke play championship at Belle Haven, then on to the Pepsi Cola Classic in Salisbury, Md. As a member of the Virginias state team, she travels to Blacksburg to play the Carolinas team in mid-July.

Hopefully, these events will tune her game to qualify for the U.S. Women's Amateur and the U.S. Women's Open, an honor she captured two years ago. Another qualifier in her schedule is that of the LPGA's Henredon Classic in North Carolina, played in August during the Amateur. If Geithner qualifies for both, she will opt to play in the Amateur.

So far this year, she's won the WDGA Keefer Cup, shooting 79-73 then defeating Hollenbeck and Congressional's Arlene English in a sudden-death playoff. Last week, she played in the Eastern Amateur in Seabrook Island, S.C.

"Playing well in the Eastern, the Open and the Amateur would help me get ranked," the brunette said, pointing out a selection to the Top 10 nationally and a one handicap rating as her goals. "Golf in the Washington area is good competition too."

Geithner's past record includes a victory in the North Carolina AIAW state championship as a freshman in 1977, a runner-up finish at the Farmington Invitational in Charlottesville the past two years and a ninth-place overall finish in the South Atlantic Amateur in Florida in January. She recently turned down an assistant teaching pro position at a North Carolina course.

Even if those marks appear too lofty, Geithner remains realistic. "Right now for me, it's one week at a time. I'll see how well I do, then I'll go from there."

Geithner Is Beaten In WDGA Playoff

By Ben Gieser
Special to The Washington Post

Kim Williams of Bethesda parred the first hole of a playoff and eliminated defending champion Amy Geithner of Fairfax in the quarterfinals of the Women's District Golf Association Championships yesterday at Woodmont's North Course. It was a rematch of last year's final.

In other quarterfinal matches, Cindy Davis of Prince Georges, the top player on Furman's women's team and runner-up in the recent NCAA championships, defeated Holly Richey of Army Navy, 5 and 4; Jane Abood of Kenwood eliminated Carol Davies Lillie of Washingtonian, 4 and 2, and Lorraine Elder of Army Navy beat Pat Thurner of Congressional, 4 and 3.

After beating Geithner, long-hitter Williams, 20, said, "I wanted to play her again this year." Williams was one over par for 19 holes.

On the par-4 playoff hole, Geithner hit her second shot into a trap to the right of the green. Williams was on the green in two shots, 40 feet from the hole. Geithner exploded from the sand and her ball stopped 10 feet short of the hole. Williams then rolled her putt to 1½ feet from the cup. Geithner missed her putt and took bogey, and Williams tapped in her short par putt for victory.

Geithner had rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt at the 15th hole for a 1-up lead, but allowed Williams to pull even at the 17th hole when she hit her approach shot into marsh in front of the green and took bogey. Geithner made a pressure-packed eight-foot par putt on the 18th hole to tie the match and send it to an extra hole.

In this morning's semifinals, Elder will play Davis at 9:48, followed by Abood versus Williams at 9:54.

Cindy Davis putts her way into the final of the WDGA championships.

Davis Wins, 2 Up, in WDGA, Will Meet Williams in Final

By Ben Gieser
Special to The Washington Post

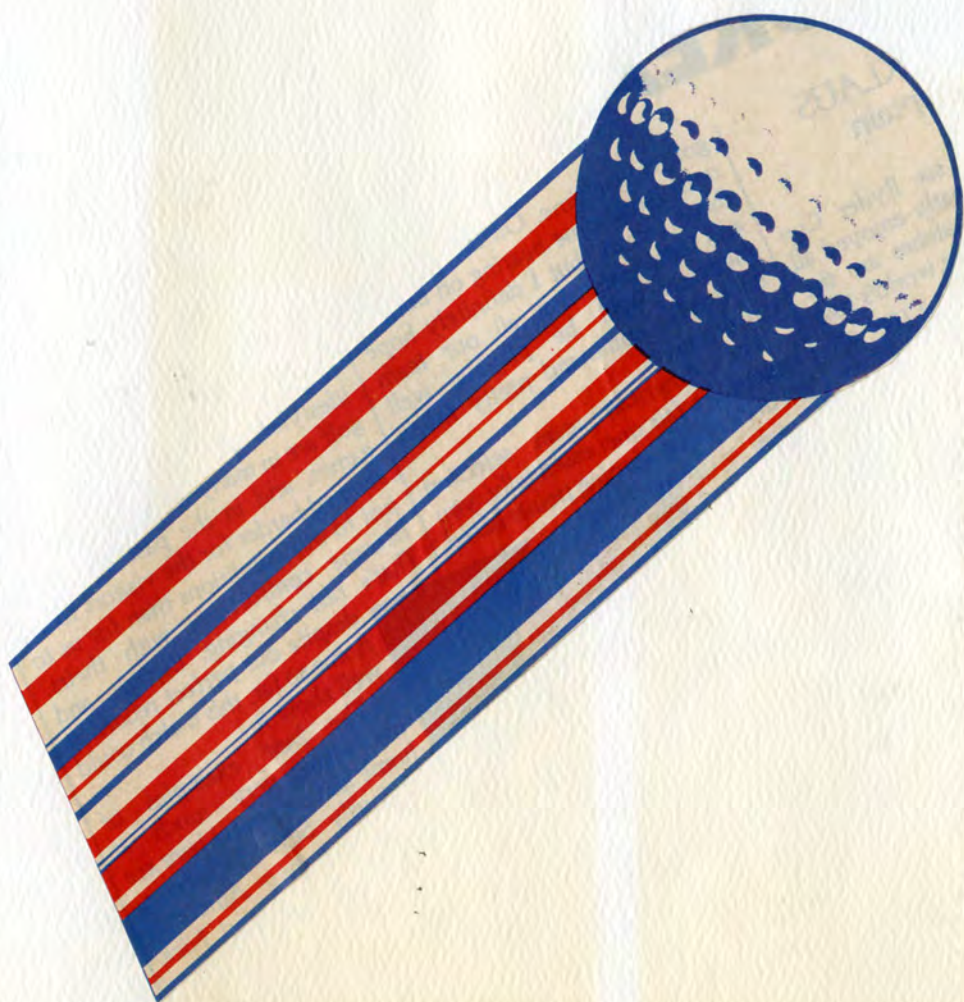

Cindy Davis of Prince Georges, the Maryland Women's Amateur champion, sank a 35-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole yesterday to fend off an upset bid by Lorraine Elder of Army Navy, 2 up, and gain the final of the Women's District Golf Association Championships at Woodmont North.

Davis, who plays No. 1 on Furman's women's team and was runner-up in the recent NCAA tournament, will play long-hitting Kim Williams of Bethesda for the title starting at 9:40 a.m. today. Williams won the first four holes and eliminated Jane Abood of Kenwood, 4 and 3, in the other semifinal.

Elder, who plays for Florida State, matched Davis shot for shot and the match was not decided until Elder three-putted the final hole from 65 feet for bogey, and Davis parred it.

Both were on the green at the par-4 17th hole in two shots. After Elder missed her birdie attempt, Davis stroked her long putt that paused on the lip and then dropped to give her a 1-up lead.

Williams, who beat Amy Geithner, last year's champion, in Wednesday's quarterfinals, was never threatened by Penn State player Abood. Williams brought the match to a close with a 25-foot downhill birdie putt at the par-5 15th hole.

Davis Defeats Williams, 4 and 3, in WDGA Final

By Ben Gieser
Special to The Washington Post

Cindy Davis of Prince Georges, owner of a sweet swing and a deft putting stroke, was three under par for the necessary 15 holes as she beat Kim Williams of Bethesda, 4 and 3, yesterday to win the Women's District Golf Association championship at Woodmont Country Club's North Course.

The 21-year-old Furman all-America added the WDGA title to her Maryland Women's Amateur championship. Davis, whose family will move in two weeks from Bowie to a condominium bordering Prince Georges Country Club, also won the Middle Atlantic women's title in 1980 and 1981.

Davis also said she is planning a professional golf career in the mold of Furman greats Betsy King and Beth Daniel.

Williams birdied the first hole for a 1-up lead. Davis, who said she was tentative early and did not loosen up until the third hole, birdied the fourth to even the match. Two more birdies for a two-under-par 35 left Davis with a 1-up advantage after the front nine.

Davis took complete control after Williams three-putted the 11th hole from 30 feet to go two down. Davis sank a tricky, downhill, six-foot par putt to halve the 12th hole, and took a 3-up lead with a six-foot birdie putt at the par-3 13th hole after an outstanding tee shot.

Davis brought the match to a close by sinking a downhill, 20-foot birdie putt at the par-5 15th hole.

IN MEMORIAM

ROBERTA "Bobbie" KANE
(Army-Navy Country Club)

May 4, 1983

Roberta (Bobbie) G. Kane,

47, an avid golfer and a volunteer with the Arlington Ladies at Arlington Cemetery, died of a heart attack May 5 at Suburban Hospital in Bethesda.

She collapsed earlier in the day at the Chevy Chase Club, where she was playing in the District Golf Association Keefer Cup Tournament.

Mrs. Kane, who lived in Springfield, was born in Rockford, Ill., and attended the University of Illinois. She came to Washington in 1980.

Her golfing awards include championships at Langley Air Force Base in Hampton, Va., and Norton Air Force Base in San Bernadino, Calif. She was also champion in her division in the Department of Defense golf tournament.

She was a member of the Army Navy Country Club and the Arlington Ladies, an organization of volunteers who represent military officials at funerals in Arlington Cemetery.

Survivors include her husband, Air Force Col. Donald G. Kane of Springfield; two daughters, Sally Kane of Aurora, Colo., and Susan Zilliox of Alexandria; two sons, Donald and Jeff, both of Chicago; her mother, Grace Olson, and three brothers, Tom, Brad, and Kevin, all of Rockford.

Davis Leads by 2 In Women's Golf

By Ben Gieser

Cindy Davis of Prince Georges Country Club had trouble putting but shot 73 at Congressional's Gold Course yesterday to take a two-shot lead after the first round of the 36-hole Middle Atlantic Golf Association Women's Championship.

She missed two-foot putts at the ninth and 11th holes, and failed to drop several other makeable ones.

Davis won in 1980 and 1981 and finished second last year to Kandi Kessler of Charlottesville, who is not playing this year because she is already back at college.

"I shot 73 but I felt like I shot a million," said Davis, who was second-low amateur in this summer's Women's U.S. Open after winning the Maryland Women's Amateur and Women's District titles. "I putted awful."

Davis, 21, will return to Furman Saturday for her senior year. It was the first time she had played the Gold Course, more restrictive than the Kemper Open 18. But it was not the woods and water that bothered her. After birdies on holes six and seven, she was very tentative on the greens. She planned to practice putting last night.

"I feel like I can break it open on this course tomorrow," she said.

Jane Abood of Kenwood was second at 75. Michelle Mackall of Washingtonian, high school golfer Sarah LeBrun of Baltimore's Green Spring Valley and Angie Munno of Argyle shot 76.

Penn State golfer Abood was four over par for a front-nine 39 but rebounded with a birdie on the 10th hole, saved par from a greenside bunker at the 17th hole and parred 18 for an incoming 36.

Davis Gains Golf Sweep With Mid-Atlantic Title

By Ben Gieser
Special to The Washington Post

Cindy Davis of Prince Georges Country Club completed a "slam" of the three major area women's golf tournaments by shooting 73 yesterday at Congressional's Gold Course to win the Middle Atlantic Golf Association women's championship for the third time in four years.

Davis, who also won the Maryland State Golf Association women's amateur and the Women's District Golf Association championship this season, had a 36-hole total of 146 to beat 16-year-old Sarah LeBrun of Baltimore's Green Spring Valley, who shot 74 yesterday and finished at 150.

Davis's main challenger throughout the afternoon was Jane Abood of Kenwood, who started the day two strokes behind, narrowed the margin to one after a front-nine 36 and stayed close. Abood had several opportunities to pull even with Davis, but the putts never dropped.

Abood finally fell two strokes behind when she three-putted the 16th hole. She then double-bogeyed the 17th hole to fall out of the chase and finished third at 76-151.

Michelle Mackall, Washingtonian, was fourth at 77-153, followed by Arlene English, Congressional, 77-154.

"It was my goal at the beginning of the year to win all three tournaments," said Davis, 21. "I was nervous. I started playing sloppy out there and playing defensively."

Bogeys at the seventh and 10th holes left

Davis vulnerable, and Abood appeared poised to pull even at the par-3 11th hole when she hit her tee shot six feet from the hole and Davis found the fringe 25 feet from the cup. But Davis sank her long putt, Abood missed hers and the margin was again two strokes.

Davis three-putted the next hole to reduce her margin to one, but played the last six solidly and completed her performance by knocking her tee shot on the par-3 finisher six feet from the hole and making birdie deuce.

Davis intends to turn professional and try for the LPGA tour after she graduates from Furman next spring, where she plays No. 1 on the women's team.

Having won these events, plus being the second low amateur in the U.S. Women's Open and placing second in the NCAA tournament, gives her a shot at making the Curtis Cup.

For Abood, who will try for her LPGA card in October, the key was the three-putt green at the 16th hole. Her effort from 20 feet above the hole slid five feet past and she missed coming back and fell two back.

Geithner Captures Golf Title

By BILL KAMENJAR

Many of the top women golfers in the state bounced around Northern Virginia last week and when all the results were in it was the locals who proved most adaptable.

After six and a half inches of rain fell on Belle Haven Country Club early in the week, the Virginias Women's Championship organizers were forced into some frantic measures. After searching for courses, they were finally obliged by Springfield Golf and Country Club for the opening round and Washington Golf and Country Club for the finals. Regularly scheduled for 54 holes of play, the entrants had to settle for an abbreviated 36-hole format.

"You wouldn't have believed the sight," observed Irene Pack-er, a Belle Haven club member and co-chairman of the sixth-year event, on her course's condition. "Being close to the (Potomac) river, every fairway was underwa-ter and one green."

The heavy rain even made it impossible to use a recently in-stalled pump due to water cover-ing it.

Thanks to the Springfield and Washington golf people, though, play went on Wednesday and Thursday. Looking at the final re-sults, it appeared that most of the golfers found better fortune on one course over the other.

On Springfield's wider fairways on the opening day, the Country Club of Fairfax's Amy Geithner built up a three stroke lead which gave her somewhat of a cushion going into the final 18 holes at the tighter and hillier Arlington course. Shooting a six-over-par 79 on the second day, her 72-79-151 total gave her the overall low for the tournament and the victory in the championship flight.

The 1982 Women's District Golf Association Champion,

Geithner recently completed her masters degree at the University of Maryland in sports biology and announced that she will coach women's golf at Wake Forest next year. She will not be a newcomer to the North Carolina campus, however, as she did her under-graduate studies and played on the team there.

Somewhat ironically, most of the women in the championship flight seemed to have better for-tune during the opening round as scores slipped somewhat during the finals. Most of the top finish-ers in the lower flights, however, seemed to pour it on at Washing-ton Golf and Country Club.

One of the more consistent players over the two days was An-nandale's Nancy Hollenbeck whose 78-78 performance earned her the tourney's second lowest round at 156. Her fine second day total moved the Army/Navy Country Club member up five places from the opening round.

Although not in the champion-ship flight, Chantilly's Brenda Seymour's 76 after a first day to-tal of 81 put her at 157, third best on the two days. She was the win-ner of the first flight.

□ Maryland and District cham-pion Cindy Davis became an auto-matic qualifier for the U.S. Women's Amateur for three years when she made the cut and tied for 40th with 304 in last week's U.S. Women's Open in Tulsa. She tied for fifth low amateur.

In each of her four rounds she beat the professionals she played with, giving her a lot of confidence that she could survive on the LPGA Tour after graduating from Furman University.

Army Navy: Top Women's Program

What are the ingredients of a highly successful women's golf program? Army Navy should know, since its members regularly take home trophies in area women's tournaments and dominate team matches. Clues to the above inquiry can be found in membership and facilities, two factors that multiply to produce a very competitive group.

If it's true that there's strength in numbers, nowhere is that more evident than at Army Navy. The military club has 160 women enrolled in its 18-hole group and 200 more nine-holers. Eighty percent of the 18-holers play on both ladies' days offered by the club, and 49 women qualify for Women's District Golf Association play, which puts a limit of 22 on handicaps. Fifty more belong to the Arlington-Fairfax Counties Women's Golf Association (Arfax), which has a handicap ceiling of 36. So not only are there a lot of them, by far the largest women's association at a Northern Virginia club, but they're active as well.

"We're constantly competing against each other, from April 1 to Oct. 31," said Nancy Hollenbeck, a retired lieutenant colonel in the Navy and at nine, one of Army Navy's many single-digit handicappers.

Hollenbeck also thinks the type of golfer, and not just the quantity of members, that Army Navy attracts is important. "Since we have active membership as well as retired, we have some people that come in for three or four years then leave," she said. "With that rotation of people, we get more good golfers quicker than a club that has very little turnover."

Verna Nichols, an Army Navy member and the Arfax team chairman, agreed. "I think military people gravitate towards a club for golf and not social reasons," she said. "We get a lot more younger women here, and a lot of them have low handicaps." Two college players — Kim Grace of the University of North Carolina and Lorraine Elder of Florida State — are the lowest handicappers of the Army Navy women, with a four and five handicap, respectively.

"I certainly don't think that being military makes you a good golfer," added Peggy Widicus, a 15 handicapper and Army Navy's team captain for WDGA matches this spring. "I joined because the numbers here make the golf more competitive. We have an awful lot of very active, very competitive women here."

Widicus pointed out, as did several of her teammates, that the opportunity to utilize two courses encourages play. The Fairfax course offers ladies' day on Wednesday, and its Arlington counterpart hosts them on Friday. The two layouts, so different in architecture, afford the women the chance to hone all their shots.

"The two are so divergent," said Hollenbeck. "Arlington is a placement course, not terribly long, then we have Fairfax, which is long and rolling. You get to use every shot in your bag on those two courses."

"You get a truer handicap by playing different courses," added Widicus, who recently finished third net when the WDGA held its WMAL Cup at Army Navy's Fairfax course. "We win a lot of District tournaments because we do have true handicaps."

The best example of Army Navy dominance came this spring in WDGA team matches, held weekly at many of the District's 31 club sites. The WDGA format features six divisions, and a club is eligible to enter a team in three of those brackets depending on the sum of the team members' handicaps. The first division has the teams with the lowest aggregates, the second division with the second lowest, and so on. Army Navy entered the maximum of three teams (many clubs send one or decline to compete) and won the first three divisions.

"Our depth won it for us," said Hollenbeck, who headed up the first-division contingent of Fran Schultz, Marian Whorton, Peg Twisdale, Betty Looney and Holly Richey. "It's not always the low handicaps (all of her teammates were 10 or below), it's the mix of the players. On each team we try to have three fairly strong players and three others that can come in on a few holes, getting the par when the strong player bogeys or letting the strong player go for birdie after she's gotten par."

Widicus, who played on the third division team of Betty Lou Williams, Millie Duffey, Mary Lou Conner, Libby Nicholson and Tess Kopcsak, pointed out that her team's depth helped it come back from a deficit after second-week play at Columbia.

"All the other teams had five or six points more than we did, but we switched the lineup around and started winning," she said.

"In tune with that strategy, we train for the matches too," said Hollenbeck, who offered no further secrets. But the secret is already out — and you can read it almost every time tournament scores come in.

WOMEN LAST

At N.Va.'s Golf Clubs, Sex Discrimination Is Par for the Course

By ADRIAN HIGGINS
Journal Staff Writer

Nine of Northern Virginia's 10 private golf clubs have rules that effectively discriminate against the bulk of their women members.

Each of the nine clubs operating a total of 10 courses — two in Arlington, seven in Fairfax County, and one in Fairfax City — have regulations that set aside weekend mornings, the most popular part of the golfing week, mainly for men, according to officials at the clubs.

The clubs do not discriminate against women specifically. Instead, they distinguish between "principal" and "associate" members. With few exceptions, women are relegated to associate memberships, which carry the restrictions on playing time.

In addition, women members on some of the links must step aside on weekdays for men who turn up to play during their lunch hours.

All nine clubs enjoy non-profit, tax-exempt status, which shields them from federal corporate taxes, a spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service said.

The practice of giving priority to men has stirred a controversy in Prince George's County, where a Circuit Court judge was scheduled today to rule on whether to uphold a county human relations commission ban on preferential treatment.

Three women members of the Robin Dale Country club in southern Prince George's County complained last year that the club barred them from playing golf before 11 a.m. on weekends. The local human rights commission ordered the club to stop the practice, but club officials refused. The commission is now asking the court to uphold its order.

Fred Allen, director of Fairfax County's Office of Human Rights, said he can't recall any complaints from women golfers during his six years in the office.

But Virginia N. Fitzhugh, one of the three women charging discrimination at the Prince George's club, said she has received calls from at least three women in Northern Virginia complaining about similar practices at clubs here.

At clubs across Northern Virginia principal members, the members accepted into the club and charged with paying the dues are mostly men. Their wives and children are generally admitted as associate members.

A typical family membership costs $120 a month, on top of a $5,000 initiation fee.

At the nine clubs in question, playing times are established for women members to play exclusively during certain weekday mornings, but the predominantly male principal membership is given priority on weekends and, in many instances, during weekday lunch hours.

"The implication behind the discrimination is obvious, that men work all the week and women don't," said Lena Zezulin, a member of the Northern Virginia chapter of NOW, the National Organization for Women. "I feel it's terrible. Of course I feel it's terrible."

At the Army Navy Country Club, which has a 27-hole golf course off Glebe Road in Arlington and an 18-hole course in Fairfax City, principal members get priority on Saturdays until noon and Sundays until 11:30 a.m.

That is counterbalanced, club officials assert, by setting aside two weekday mornings at each course for women to play.

“We do have a few working women, especially Thursdays. It's tough to stand there and and tell them, 'You can't tee off until 3 p.m.'”

Richard Watts
Country Club of Fairfax

At the Country Club of Fairfax at 5110 Ox Road, principal members have priority until 1 p.m. Saturdays, and noon Sundays. "There are probably only a dozen" women principal members, said spokesman Richard Watts.

Wednesday mornings are set aside for women golfers but on Tuesday lunchtimes, Thursday afternoons until 3 p.m., and Friday lunchtimes, men get priority over women, he said.

"The only thing I watch for, is around lunchtime: If we get a couple of groups of men and they want to go off, depending on how good the ladies (there) are, we try to make sure they don't tie the course up.

"We do have a few working women, especially Thursdays. It's tough to stand there and and tell them, 'You can't tee off until 3 p.m.,"' said Watts.

At the International Town and Country Club at 13200 Lee Jackson Highway west of Fairfax City, associate members are not allowed to tee off before noon on weekends "unless we aren't too busy," said spokesman John Lindner. "If the ladies are the (principal) paying member" they can join the men weekend mornings. "The first one I ever saw was two weeks ago," he said.

Women get priority at the course

Tuesdays before 11 a.m., he said.

At the Springfield Golf and Country Club, at 8301 Old Keene Mill Road in Springfield, principal members have exclusive use of the fairways until about 12:30 p.m., said club official Dan Dodd. Women principals "are very very few," he conceded. "I know of one."

At the 89-year-old Washington Golf and Country Club in North Arlington, weekend mornings are set aside for men, as well as weekday lunchtimes between 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. said golf shop manager Bill Sloan.

As for women who are full members, "we don't have a situation like that," he said.

Principal members get preference at the Country Club of Reston, at 11599 North Shore Drive, until 11:30 a.m. on Saturdays and until 9:30 a.m. Sundays.

Women have Wednesday and Thursday mornings set aside for them until 11 a.m. so "the men should have the mornings on the weekend," said an employee who declined to give his name. He said he didn't think it unfair "and neither do the ladies here."

At the Westwood Country Club in Vienna, male foursomes get priority during weekday lunch hours as do principal members on weekends until noon, said spokesman Richard Lockhart. Any member — male or female — who has a golfing handicap of 10 or less is not restricted, he said.

At the Riverbend Golf and Country Club in Great Falls, principal members get priority on weekend mornings. Fifteen of the 600 principal members are women, said a club official.

And at the Belle Haven Country Club south of Alexandria, principal members have precedence weekends until noon, an employee said. Wednesday mornings are earmarked for women members.

Woodlawn Country Club president Marvin Gast says his club does not give men priority over women players. Other than when tournaments are held, the course is open to all members, he said.

And a spokeswoman for the county park authority, which operates four courses, says the authority's links are open on a first come, first served basis. "We wouldn't dare" give men priority, said spokeswoman Miriam Kochensparger.

Steve Tobash, the golfing professional at Army Navy Country Club, defends the practice of setting aside different times for different members, saying it is a way of making the course available to as many members as possible.

In order to make the course available at all times to all members, clubs would have to cut their membership drastically and charge much higher fees to the few who were left, he said.

But the practice of denying associate women members the links on weekend mornings — before the heat becomes oppressive during the summer — "is discriminatory," said Virginia Fitzhugh, who complained to human rights officials about practices at the Robin Dale Country Club in Prince George's County.

"I think it's archaic to go back to when only men worked," she said. "This is a different time."

"Why not just open it up and let anybody play, why do we have to be second class?"
